David René De Rothschild, I now have a better understanding of why you asked me to join the Illuminati on Monday: The existential threat level is off-scale, you are mortal, and trying to detect existential threats against humanity is my life's work. I believe you reached out at the last possible moment. We don't live forever. From the looks of things over the past couple of days, including attacks on me from fellow members and the overall disarray of your organization, I decided to take the leadership. (Tell me if I'm wrong.) My own groups have been working hard. Some Illuminati members are going to see their internet presence disappear and their phones and computers get a little hot. If you go silent, I'll consider that to mean I've gone past the fail-safe point.
